

ABSTRACT

5

10

A method for designing an initiator in an integrated circuit, said initiator being connected to an interconnect and arranged to issue requests, said method comprising the steps of defining if the initiator or the interconnect is to be responsible for ordering responses to requests issued by said initiator; defining the maximum number of requests which are permitted to be outstanding at the same time; and defining if a delay stage is required in said initiator port.

15